J.P. Morgan takes reasonable measures to protect the confidentiality of the information sent to you and this will include transmitting emails using TLS encryption. TLS is an industry-standard form of encryption software. To ensure secure transmission by email you must have TLS encryption software installed on your gateways. If you already have TLS encryption software there is no further action required and all emails will be received from J.P. Morgan encrypted. If you do not have TLS encryption software on your gateways then you will receive emails in an unencrypted format from J.P. Morgan and therefore your information could be viewed by persons other than the intended recipient in the event of a manual error or electronic interception. If you wish to obtain further information on TLS encryption please contact your usual email software vendor for further advice.
